in the St. Louis City death records.⁴⁷ Between 1910⁴⁸ and 1916,⁴⁹ the couple and their children had moved to their new residence on 5216 Cote Brillante Avenue, which was the first recorded home that the couple owned.⁵⁰ The Jannuzzo surname was also spelled as Jennia.⁵¹

The family attended several Catholic churches during their lifetimes. The first Italian church in the city of St. Louis was St. Bonaventure, located on 6th and Spruce Streets beginning in 1871, and the parish was eventually closed in 1883 due to its unfavorable location.⁵² From 1883 to 1900, there were no strictly Italian parishes located within the city, although Italian immigrants attended other churches with mixed denominations.⁵³ In December of 1899, Father Cesare Spigardi, an immigrant Italian priest, began to work towards the creation of an Italian church in the city, partly because, "...there are more than 10,000 Italians in this city, 6,000 of whom cannot speak English..."⁵⁴ A new church, Our Lady of Hopes, was the result of his hard work, and soon afterwards, the church was renamed St. Charles Borromeo.⁵⁵ The Farina's and extended family members, including the Jannuzzo's, attended St. Charles Borromeo's Catholic Church on 29th and Locust. But after the death of Father Spigardi in 1931, the church quickly fell into disuse,⁵⁶ although there are sacramental records dating up to 1981.⁵⁷

Antonio was naturalized on 17 September 1896 in St. Louis City, Missouri,⁵⁸ and became a member of the Fratellanza society,⁵⁹ along with his brother-in-law Fiorindo "Frank" Doredò,⁶⁰ (the husband of Philomena's sister Mary Angela Jannuzzo). The Societa Unione e Fratellanza Italiana was the first Italian mutual aid society founded in St. Louis.⁶¹ Created in 1886, this society, like other mutual aid societies that sprung up during the nineteenth century, was created to give job security and monetary protection (including the payment of doctor's bills and illness benefits) to the city's Italian immigrants.⁶² But more importantly, it functioned as the means for Italian immigrants to have decent funerals and burials through both financial contributions and honorable vigils.⁶³

According to one member of the Hill community, undertaker Frank Borghi, "...the day of the funeral, members [of the mutual aid society] would form an entourage...and in a final gesture of tribute would march by the home of the deceased...because you see, owning a home meant so much to these immigrants..."⁶⁴ On 21 April 1949, Antonio's funeral took place at St. Mark's Catholic Church in St. Louis City,⁶⁵ and he was laid to rest on that same day next to his beloved wife of over forty years, Philomena, at Calvary Cemetery.⁶⁶
